INTRODUCTION

The A-Level History curriculum reflects the value placed on the study of history and the development of 21st Century Competencies by:

- (a) developing the dispositions to be curious about the past and open to multiple perspectives
- (b) engaging the learners in historical inquiry to develop confident, self-directed, critical and reflective thinkers
- (c) equipping the learners with an understanding of historical concepts, methods and processes to make informed judgements of the past and to better understand the present
- (d) equipping the learners with historical knowledge and understanding to develop local, regional and global awareness and cross-cultural skills
- (e) enhancing the learners' appreciation of the past to develop their sense of identity and cultivate concerned citizens.

These objectives are aligned to the statement of philosophy of history education in Singapore. The philosophy, which underpins the design of history education from lower secondary to the pre-university level, encapsulates the fundamental purpose and value of learning history:

History education in Singapore seeks to develop in students an appreciation of past human experiences, critical awareness of the nature of historical knowledge, and the ability to make connections between the past and present.

The A-Level History curriculum shape encapsulates the key features of the H1, H2 and H3 syllabuses.

A-Level History Curriculum Shape

Historical understanding (core) is the key goal of learning history. It is achieved through the development of historical thinking and historical knowledge (innermost ring). Historical thinking comprises the disciplinary processes of constructing history, while historical knowledge refers to the substantive knowledge of history.

The development of historical thinking and knowledge is undertaken through the learning of historical and content concepts, as well as the acquisition of historical inquiry and skills (middle ring). Historical and content concepts provide the conceptual lens for thinking and knowing, while historical inquiry and skills are the disciplinary tools.

The development of these concepts and skills is contextualised in the study of local, regional and global developments and their interconnections, as well as the role of historical agency in these developments (outermost ring). The curriculum provides students with breadth and depth of content to facilitate their development of historical understanding.

AIMS

By the end of studying H2 History, students would be able to:

- develop interest in and curiosity about the past
- deepen historical understanding through:
  - acquiring a sound knowledge of local, regional and global developments and their interconnections, the role of historical agency and relevant content concepts
  - applying historical concepts in examining historical issues and events
  - examining different interpretations of historical issues and events
  - using historical inquiry and skills
  - appreciating the nature and variety of historical sources
- think independently and make informed judgements of historical issues and events
- communicate balanced and substantiated arguments and judgements on historical issues and events in a clear and well-structured manner
- develop empathy with people living in diverse places and at different times
- enhance their sense of identity and be concerned citizens.

ASSESSMENT OBJECTIVES

H2 History students are expected to:

AO1: Demonstrate Historical Knowledge and Understanding

- Select and deploy historical knowledge appropriately and communicate historical knowledge and understanding in a clear and effective manner.

AO2: Critically Analyse and Evaluate Historical Issues

- Construct historical explanations that demonstrate an understanding of historical concepts and issues within a historical period.
- Where appropriate, construct historical explanations that assess different interpretations of historical issues.
- Make judgements based on reasoned consideration of historical evidence and interpretations.

AO3: Interpret, Analyse and Evaluate Sources as Evidence

- Interpret, analyse, evaluate and use source materials in context as historical evidence.
- Make judgements and reach conclusions based on reasoned consideration of historical sources.

SCHEME OF ASSESSMENT

Candidates are required to sit for two papers, with a duration of 3 hours each. Each paper is assessed by a compulsory source-based case study and essay questions.

Candidates will receive the question papers in hard copy. A digital answer booklet will be provided with each question paper. Candidates are required to type their responses in the digital answer booklet.

SPECIFICATION GRID

Paper 1: The Changing International Order (1945–2000)

Note: AO1 forms part of testing of AO2 and AO3.

DESCRIPTION OF COMPONENTS

SOURCE-BASED CASE STUDY

The theme for the source-based case study is prescribed. Candidates are expected to have a sound knowledge of the prescribed theme and an understanding of the ways in which sources may be evaluated. A maximum of six sources will be set for the source-based case study. Differing accounts of the same situations or issues may be set. These accounts may show different views as time progresses or in communicating with different recipients and audiences. A variety of sources may be used, for example, texts, statistics, political cartoons and maps. The sources set will total no more than 900 words (or their equivalent where non-textual sources are used). The first sub-question requires candidates to compare two sources. The second sub-question presents candidates with an assertion which they need to test against a given set of sources and their background knowledge of issues. The questions will be assessed using holistic level descriptors (Appendix A).

ESSAY QUESTIONS

Candidates' answers should be focused and show depth of historical understanding. In addition, the answers should demonstrate a high level of conceptual ability and an evaluation of the assumptions implied in the question. Candidates are required to answer in continuous prose and the clarity of the language used by the candidate in presenting the argument will be taken into account. For Paper 2: Developments in Southeast Asia (Independence–2000), candidates must engage in comparative studies of countries in the Southeast Asian region. For each essay question, candidates are expected to compare a minimum of three countries as case studies. Essay questions will not be set on the prescribed themes selected for the source-based case study in both Papers 1 and 2. The essays will be assessed using holistic level descriptors (Appendix B).

SYLLABUS CONTENT

Understanding the Past and its Connections to the Present

The H2 History syllabus focuses on the key forces and developments that shaped the second half of the 20th Century, providing students with the necessary historical context to understand key contemporary geopolitical and economic shifts. The syllabus comprises two papers that equip students with breadth and depth of knowledge in global, regional and local developments and their interconnections, as well as the agency of diverse historical actors.

Historical Concepts

Eight historical concepts have been identified, based on their centrality to the discipline of history and age-appropriateness for students. The concepts form the framework for historical thinking, supporting the development of conceptual understanding in H2 History. A glossary of the eight historical concepts is provided in Appendix C.

Paper 1: The Changing International Order (1945–2000)

In this paper, students will explore the interactions between historical actors and the Cold War environment, which influenced the development of the international security and economic order in the latter half of the 20th Century. The Cold War fundamentally transformed the global economy and international security. Superpower rivalry on a global scale exerted significant influence on new and existing nation-states to produce deep and far-reaching political and economic changes in them. The varied political and economic responses of local and regional actors to superpower rivalry in turn shaped the development of the international order. Even after the end of the Cold War, aspects of this international order continued to loom large as the world adapted to the post-Cold War era. Studying this paper will allow students to appreciate the changes and continuities in the period under study, the legacies of the Cold War and the developments in the global order today.

- Theme I: The Development of the Cold War (1945–1991) (source-based case study)
- Theme II: The Development of the Global Economy (1945–2000)
- Theme III: Conflict and Cooperation (1945–2000)

Paper 2: Developments in Southeast Asia (Independence<sup>1</sup>–2000)

In this paper, students will examine the key developments that took place within Southeast Asian countries and in the region after independence. Using a thematic-comparative approach, students will learn about the varied experiences of Southeast Asian countries in forming nation-states, pursuing economic goals and forging relations with other Southeast Asian countries. These individual trajectories were shaped by factors internal and external to each country, as well as its past. As Southeast Asian countries charted their own paths, they responded to domestic opportunities and challenges, and to Cold War developments and changes in the global economy. Collectively, these countries formed new relationships with external powers and developed a new identity as the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN). Studying this paper will allow students to better understand the patterns of developments in Southeast Asia, and the interactions among different historical actors within each country and in the region. These historical perspectives will equip students to better understand Southeast Asia today.

- Theme I: Forming Nation-States
- Theme II: Economic Change After Independence
- Theme III: Regional Conflicts and Cooperation (source-based case study)

It is recommended that the case studies be carefully selected to provide a meaningful study of the similarities and differences in the developments and experiences of this region. Candidates are expected to select at least three countries as case studies to support their answers. The following countries could be selected as possible case studies: Brunei, Cambodia, Indonesia, Laos, Malaysia, Myanmar (Burma), Singapore, Thailand, the Philippines and Vietnam.

<sup>1</sup> As Thailand was not formally colonised, the period of study for Thailand begins in 1946, when its first post-war government was established.

Paper 1: The Changing International Order (1945–2000)

Theme I	THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE COLD WAR (1945–1991)
	How did the Cold War develop? How did the Cold War impact global developments after 1945?
	OVERVIEW
In this theme, students will study the Cold War which resulted from the USA and USSR emerging as ideologically-opposed superpowers after the Second World War. These tensions, which largely began in Europe, extended to other parts of the world, where it interacted with forces such as nationalism and decolonisation to bring profound changes to domestic politics in these countries, which in turn shaped the development of the Cold War. Furthermore, students will examine how the Cold War order initially defined by bipolarity, developed to feature more complex dynamics with China's rise as a Cold War actor in Asia.	Today's multipolar world is shaped by the legacy of the Cold War. Despite these key shifts in the international order, the Cold War continues to feature as the backdrop for the current state of international affairs. Many present-day challenges to international stability, such as terrorism, civil strife and ongoing wars, were shaped by the Cold War. Cold War worldviews also continue to shape the decision-making of world leaders, particularly those who experienced it. Understanding the Cold War provides students with insights into the key relationships that shape today's evolving world order.

Theme II	THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE GLOBAL ECONOMY (1945–2000)
	How did the global economy develop? How did the development of the global economy impact different countries?
	OVERVIEW	MAKING CONNECTIONS
	In this theme, students will study the development of the global economy in the post-war period. The global economy experienced unprecedented growth as a result of the unique mix of factors and conditions emerging from a post-war environment. Economic challenges, such as forces of protectionism, accompanied the growth of the global economy and had an increasingly global impact, with diverse outcomes for different countries. Situated within this changing global economy, the East Asian economies of post-war Japan and post-1978 China showcased how countries leveraged global economic changes to chart their own paths to economic development.	Studying the global economy's growth and challenges provides students with the necessary context to understand the key players and global challenges of today's world: trade wars, financial crises and global disparities. Regardless of the shifting economic power between countries and regions, countries recognise the mutually beneficial arrangement of being a part of an interconnected economy. Understanding the history of the global economy's development and the transformative experiences of national economies enables students to appreciate the diverse approaches to achieving economic goals and the recurring nature of economic change.

Theme III	CONFLICT AND COOPERATION (1945–2000)
	Why did conflicts occur and how did they affect the international order? How effective were the attempts to manage these conflicts?
	OVERVIEW	MAKING CONNECTIONS
	In this theme, students will examine the key conflicts that shaped the international order in the post-Second World War period. Although the post-Second World War period did not witness another world war, it saw occurrences of inter-state and intra-state conflicts that had a regional and global impact. By exploring these different types of conflicts around the world, students will examine how actors with diverse interests interacted with historical conditions to embark on and shape the development of these conflicts. To mitigate the effects of these conflicts on international peace and security, various actors, ranging from the major powers to the United Nations, intervened to manage the conflicts. Students will evaluate the effectiveness of the approaches taken by these actors to manage these conflicts.	Today, conflicts continue to exist across the world, with some ongoing for decades while new ones spring up. Studying the multifaceted nature of inter-state and intra-state conflicts that occurred between the period 1945 and 2000 helps students to develop insights into the interactions that lead to different types of conflict and the processes that seek to build sustainable peace and stability in a rules-based international order. These insights enable students to understand the dynamics of present-day conflicts in an increasingly complex international environment.

Paper 2: Developments in Southeast Asia (Independence–2000)

Theme I	FORMING NATION-STATES
	How did Southeast Asian countries form states and build nations after independence? Why were the outcomes of these efforts different across Southeast Asian countries?
	OVERVIEW	MAKING CONNECTIONS
	In this theme, students will study how Southeast Asian countries formed nation-states after the Second World War. For most countries, this was an immediate and pressing task following decolonisation. The process of forming nation-states was characterised by different groups competing to shape political developments, including political parties, the military and traditional institutions. These groups came to political dominance at different points, which was reflected in the formation of different forms of government underpinned by different political ideologies. Efforts to form states were closely associated with the task of building nations to unite the different ethnic groups that lived within the territorial boundaries of the state – a legacy of colonial rule. National unity was an important objective for Southeast Asian governments to create social cohesion and a common identity for all who lived within the state. The experiences and outcomes of governments' efforts in forming nation-states were shaped by interactions between local factors, and by international developments, in particular the Cold War.	Understanding Southeast Asia's experience in forming nation-states helps students appreciate the political achievements of Southeast Asian countries and the region's political diversity. At the same time, nation-building is a continuous endeavour. The legitimacy of political structures and the pursuit of national unity continue to be challenged by long-standing issues such as tensions between state power and political representation, government performance and ethnic divisions. Globalisation has also added new pressures on the nation-state. Studying the experiences of Southeast Asian countries in forming nation-states allows students to better understand the challenges of nation-building today and governments' responses towards these challenges. Students are also able to gain insights into how Southeast Asia's political landscape continues to be shaped by an interplay between domestic and external forces.

Theme II	ECONOMIC CHANGE AFTER INDEPENDENCE
	How did Southeast Asian economies change after independence? Why were the outcomes of economic change different across Southeast Asian countries?
OVERVIEW	MAKING CONNECTIONS
In this theme, students will examine the economic change in Southeast Asia and its diverse outcomes for the economy and people. While leveraging the economic base created before the Second World War, independent Southeast Asian countries sought to restructure their economies and key economic sectors to better serve their own interests. Although some features of the economic landscape persisted, Southeast Asian economies experienced significant economic change. This economic change was shaped by Southeast Asian governments' ability to harness opportunities and mitigate the challenges brought about by domestic and international developments in their common pursuit of economic growth, equity and nationalism. Yet, this economic change was also shaped by the different historical, domestic and external conditions of the individual countries, which produced varying results across the region.	In the post-Second World War period, many Southeast Asian economies achieved spectacular growth and stood resilient in downturns. These successes have been attributed to the region's dynamic mix of government intervention with free market economics, and its adaptability to international developments. Understanding the economic experiences of Southeast Asian countries helps students better appreciate the adaptability of Southeast Asian economies in responding to domestic developments and changes in the global economy. By studying the outcomes of the economic change, students better appreciate the economic journeys of Southeast Asian countries and their ongoing challenges in charting their future economic paths.

Theme III	REGIONAL CONFLICTS AND COOPERATION
	Why did inter-state tensions occur in Southeast Asia? How did regional conflicts and cooperation shape inter-state relations in Southeast Asia?
	OVERVIEW	MAKING CONNECTIONS
In this theme, students will examine the inter-state tensions and cooperation that shaped relations between Southeast Asian countries. Southeast Asian countries devised ways of engaging with fellow sovereign countries in the region in pursuit of their national interests, which were influenced by domestic and external developments, and their past and present circumstances. Students will examine how the pursuit of these national interests contributed to tensions in some cases and provided the impetus for cooperation at other times. Formed amid the Cold War, ASEAN increasingly served as a vehicle for Southeast Asian countries to forge regional resilience and adapt to the new post-Cold War environment. Through ASEAN, students will study the impact of multilateral cooperation on inter-state relations, and the evolution of regionalism in Southeast Asia across the Cold War and post-Cold War periods.		Inter-state tensions and cooperation continue to co-exist in Southeast Asia today. Many of the inter-state tensions featured in this theme recurred after 2000 and continue to shape relations between Southeast Asian countries. At the same time, regional cooperation has contributed to regional stability, promoted further regional integration and provided a viable framework for the region to engage with external powers. ASEAN has been an important vehicle in driving regional cooperation. Despite its limitations, its achievements reflect its strengths as a regional organisation governed by norms of engagement that reflect the unique circumstances of Southeast Asia in the past and present. Knowledge of the historical development of regional tensions and cooperation contextualises students' understanding of how inter-state relations are conducted in present-day Southeast Asia.

Note: The source-based case study will be set on Theme III and may be centred on any issue arising from the theme. The source-based case study may require candidates to use their knowledge of inter-state relations as contextual knowledge to interpret and analyse sources. Separate essay questions will NOT be set on this theme.

APPENDICES

APPENDIX A: GENERIC LEVEL DESCRIPTORS FOR SECTION A: SOURCE-BASED CASE STUDY

Introduction

These level descriptors address AO3 and also exemplify how AO1 may be demonstrated. They should be used in conjunction with the indicative content mark scheme for each question. The level in which an answer is placed depends upon a range of criteria. As a result, not all answers fall obviously into one particular level. In such cases, a response must be placed in the most appropriate level using a 'best-fit' approach.

In marking an answer, examiners should first place it in a level and then ascertain a precise mark by examining how closely the demands of the level have been demonstrated.

Part a: 10 marks

Level	Marks	Descriptor
L4	9–10	The answer will make full comprehensive use of both sources. There will be clear explanation on the similarities and differences between the sources and this will be supported with source details. The answer will demonstrate a strong sense of critical evaluation of the sources throughout and provide critical insight into the reasons for their similarities and differences.
L3	7–8	The answer will make good use of both sources. There will be clear explanation on the similarities and differences between the sources and this will be supported with source details. The answer will demonstrate a sense of critical evaluation of the sources and provide some insight into the reasons for the similarities or differences. Alternatively, the insight into the reasons for similarities and differences may be uneven. Towards the lower end of the level, the answer, which explains either similarities or differences between the sources but demonstrates critical insight into the reasons for the similarities or differences, may also be found in this level.
L2	4–6	The answer will use both sources. There will be clear explanation on the similarities and differences between the sources and this will be supported with source details. Answers which explain either similarities or differences between the sources but begin to provide insight into the reasons for the similarities or differences may be found in this level. Towards the lower end of the level, the answer may explain either similarities or differences between the sources. Alternatively, there may be a tendency to treat the sources separately with most or all of the comparison implicit.
L1	1–3	The answer will describe the content of each source and is likely to be characterised by paraphrasing or quotation. Very simple comparisons may be made and these are not developed (e.g. that one source is a letter and the other is a speech). Answers that are simply based on contextual knowledge, with no source use, should be credited at this level. Towards the upper end of the level, there may be some attempt to explain the similarities and/or differences between the sources, but any explanation will be confused or partial.
L0	0	No evidence submitted or answer does not address the question.

Part b: 30 marks

Level	Marks	Descriptor
L6	26–30	The answer will treat sources as a set and make excellent use of the sources. It will demonstrate a very good understanding of the question. The answer will demonstrate a critical evaluation of the sources in context to support and challenge the hypothesis (that is, balanced). It may question how far a conclusion can be reached using the evidence in the sources. It will either explain fully why evidence to challenge or to support the hypothesis is better / preferred or justify an amended/alternative historical interpretation where appropriate. For L6, the L5 answer must also be secure. Towards the upper end of the level, the answer will present a sustained analytical argument and reach a supported conclusion. Towards the lower end of the level, the answer will demonstrate many of these features but may be less convincing in its approach.
L5	21–25	The answer will treat sources as a set and make very good use of the sources. It will demonstrate a good understanding of the question. Sources may be cross-referenced to support and/or challenge the hypothesis. The answer will demonstrate a critical evaluation of the sources in context, to support and challenge the hypothesis (that is, balanced). Towards the upper end of the level, the answer may begin to formulate a judgement in relation to the question although this is likely to be partial and incomplete.
L4	16–20	The answer will treat sources as a set and make good use of the sources. It will demonstrate a clear understanding of the question. Sources may be cross-referenced to support and/or challenge the hypothesis. There will be an attempt to evaluate the sources in context but there will be gaps, unevenness and a lack of balance. Towards the upper end of the level, the answer will be more even in evaluating sources in context, to support and challenge the hypothesis. Towards the lower end of the level, the answer will contain some evaluation of the source material but is likely to be uneven or lacking in balance.
L3	11–15	The answer will begin to treat sources as a set. It will demonstrate some understanding of the question. Some sources may be cross-referenced to support and/or challenge the hypothesis. There will be an attempt to evaluate sources, but the sources will not be placed in context. Towards the upper end of the level, the answer will make a case to support and challenge the statement in question, developing its points through accurate references to the source content and/or provenance. Such an answer is likely to use all of the sources and may make cross-references to support its ideas. Towards the lower end of the level, some sources may be neglected or used in a way which is not valid. The support/challenge element of the responses may also be uneven.
L2	5–10	The answer will use relevant information from sources at face value to support and/or challenge the hypothesis. Sources may be used in isolation. The answer may demonstrate some awareness of provenance of the sources but evaluation of the sources is unlikely. Towards the upper end of the level, the answer will be balanced, using most of the sources. There may be some attempt at evaluation that is unsuccessful. Towards the lower end of the level, the answer may be one-sided or use a limited range of sources.

Level	Marks	Descriptor
L1	1–4	The answer will make limited use of the sources. The sources may be paraphrased or described. Answers which are simply based on contextual knowledge with no source use should be credited at this level. Towards the upper end of the level, some relevant information from the sources may be extracted at face value to support and/or challenge the hypothesis, but the answer may be undeveloped.
L0	0	No evidence submitted or answer does not address the question.

APPENDIX B: GENERIC LEVEL DESCRIPTORS FOR SECTION B: ESSAYS*Introduction

These level descriptors address AO2 and also exemplify how AO1 may be demonstrated. They should be used in conjunction with the indicative content mark scheme for each question. The level in which an answer is placed depends upon a range of criteria. As a result not all answers fall obviously into one particular level. In such cases, a response must be placed in the most appropriate level using a 'best-fit' approach.

In marking an answer, examiners should first place it in a level and then ascertain a precise mark by examining how closely the demands of the level have been demonstrated. Credit will be given to those who can offer case studies to support their arguments.

Level	Marks	Quality of the Answers
L7	26–30	The overall quality will show that the candidate is in control of the argument. The approach will be consistently analytical or explanatory rather than descriptive or narrative, demonstrating clear and accurate understanding of historical concepts relevant to analysis and to the topic. The essay will be fully relevant. It will be supported by carefully selected factual material and ideas closely focused on the topic and argument made. Where appropriate, the essay will effectively assess the strengths and limitations of competing historical interpretations. The argument will be structured coherently. The writing will be accurate.
L6	22–25	The essay will be focused clearly on the demands of the question but there will be some unevenness. The approach will be mostly analytical or explanatory rather than descriptive or narrative, demonstrating secure understanding of historical concepts relevant to analysis and to the topic. Where appropriate, the essay will discuss competing historical interpretations and offers good knowledge of or evidence for these interpretations. The essay will be mostly relevant. Most of the argument will be structured coherently and supported by largely accurate factual material. The writing will be mostly accurate.
L5	19–21	The essay will reflect a clear understanding of the question and a fair attempt to provide an argument and factual knowledge to answer it. The approach will contain analysis or explanation but there may be some heavily descriptive or narrative passages. The essay will show evidence of understanding of relevant historical concepts, and some use of historical concepts will be made in analysis. Where appropriate, the essay mentions the existence of other historical interpretations and offers some relevant knowledge of, or evidence for, these interpretations. The essay will be largely relevant. Most of the argument will be structured satisfactorily but some parts may lack full coherence. The essay will achieve a genuine argument but may lack balance and depth in factual knowledge. The writing will be generally accurate.
L4	16–18	The essay will indicate attempts to argue relevantly, although often implicitly. The approach will depend more on some heavily descriptive or narrative passages than on analysis or explanation, which may be limited to introductions and conclusions. The essay will show evidence of knowledge of historical concepts and attempts may be made to use historical concepts to aid analysis. Where appropriate, the essay may mention the existence of other historical interpretations but the nature of these interpretations may not be fully understood. Factual material, sometimes very full, will be used to impart information or describe events rather than to address directly the requirements of the question. The structure of the argument could be organised more effectively. The writing will usually be accurate.

Level	Marks	Quality of the Answers
L3	13–15	The essay will offer some appropriate factual material but there will be little attempt generally to link factual material to the requirements of the question. The approach will lack analysis. The essay will include some references to historical concepts but these may not be used to develop the analysis. Where appropriate, the essay may mention the existence of other historical interpretations, though this may be implicit. The quality of the description or narrative, although sufficiently accurate and relevant to the topic if not the particular question, will not be linked effectively to the argument. The structure will show weaknesses and the treatment of topics within the essay will be unbalanced. The writing may show some accuracy but there will also be frequent errors.
L2	9–12	The essay will not be properly focused on the requirements of the question. There may be many unsupported assertions and commentaries that lack sufficient factual support. The essay may include references to historical concepts but these may not be fully understood. Where appropriate, the essay may mention the existence of other historical interpretations but this may not be explained. The argument may be of limited relevance to the topic and there may be confusion about the implications of the question.
L1	1–8	The essay will be characterised by significant irrelevance or argument that does not begin to make significant points. The essay may mention historical concepts but these will not be understood. The answers may be largely fragmentary and incoherent.
L0	0	No evidence submitted or response does not address the question.

Note: Marking of Paper 2 Developments in Southeast Asia (Independence–2000)

The rubric for the paper requires candidates to support each answer with examples drawn from at least three countries. An answer which makes reference to only two countries must not be rewarded a mark higher than Level 5, and an answer which makes reference to only one country cannot be placed higher than Level 3. A failure to support points being made carries its own penalty, in addition to the restrictions mentioned above.

APPENDIX C: GLOSSARY OF HISTORICAL CONCEPTS*Accounts

Students understand that there can be no single or complete account of the past and are able to ask good questions about the account to uncover the author's focus, point of view and context.

Chronology

Students recognise the importance of developing a sense of period and are able to construct a chronological framework of historical periods to situate new knowledge within its proper historical context.

Historical Empathy

Students appreciate the value of taking on the perspectives of historical actors and recognise the need to become familiar with the latter's ideas, values, beliefs and attitudes to make sense of the past events they study.

Evidence

Students are able to engage in sourcing, contextualisation and corroboration to determine the value of sources as evidence, so as to verify, support or substantiate the claims made about the past.

Cause and Effect

Students recognise that there are multiple short-term and long-term causes and consequences, and their interrelationships are complex. There is a need to establish a hierarchy of causes because the influence of causes leading to a particular historical event vary. Historical events result from the interplay of actions of historical actors and the conditions of the time. Likewise, students understand that events can lead to multiple consequences, which may be intended or unintended.

Change and Continuity

Students understand that change and continuity can exist together, and that change is a process. The varying pace of change and patterns in historical developments need to be analysed, and turning points, if any, need to be identified. They also understand that periodisation organises their thinking about change and continuity and use criteria to decide the events and developments that constitute a period of history.

Diversity

Students appreciate the richness and complexity of the past by studying the differences and similarities in the experiences of different groups of people. They recognise that people's experiences vary according to many factors.

Historical Significance

Historians assess significance when they determine whether a person or an event, idea or issue had deep consequences and affected people over an extended period of time, even till today. The notion of significance in history goes beyond straightforward considerations of importance or impact. Students understand that significance is not a permanent trait of the event, person, idea or issue, but that it is ascribed by historians based on a set of criteria and can be contested.
